

Ethnogeography: A Future for Primary Geography and Primary Geography Research?

Fran Martin

Senior Lecturer in Primary Education, University College Worcester

A common theme of the papers presented in this forum is that of the importance of listening to children's voices. The key messages conveyed by the authors are synthesised in this paper and the implications for the development of the subject and research within it are considered. This is then placed in the context of some recent doctoral research that draws on beginning teachers' voices and proposes a new way of conceptualising primary geography – ethnogeography – that might set an agenda for the future development and direction of primary geography research.

Keywords: children, voices, curriculum, perceptions, ethnogeography, imagination

Children's Voices

In the opening paper Catling puts forward a compelling argument for listening to children's voices, raising issues for the development of primary geography research that can be summarised under four broad headings:

- teaching for learning;
- resources;
- the curriculum;
- the future of the subject.

The first three will be examined briefly, drawing on the key messages conveyed by the authors in this publication, and an initial agenda for future research will be identified. The remainder of the paper will examine the subject issue in greater depth, drawing on some recent doctoral research into beginning teachers' development as teachers of primary geography.

Teaching for learning

As part of the agenda of building on 'where children are' it is crucial for us to identify their current levels of knowledge, understanding, skills and attitudes. In terms of children's conceptions and misconceptions of the physical world, Mackintosh and Halocho demonstrate the need for teachers to elicit children's alternative frameworks about rivers and coastal processes. Mackintosh goes on to suggest that teachers can use this information to take a bottom-up approach to progression in learning that uses concept ladders, rather than the more traditional top-down approach which focuses on progression in teaching. Halocho, Mackintosh and Owens stress the importance of outdoor learning as a key element in
