

Epidermis

The thin outer layer of the skin made of stratified (many layer) squamous (thin flat cells) epithelium (skin tissue). It is avascular (no blood supply) but gets its oxygen and nutrients through blood supplied to the dermis. It includes two layers of concern:

- Stratum Germinativum – Deepest layer, sits directly on the dermis.
- Stratum Comeum – Most superficial layer of the epidermis.

Stratum Germinativum

Layer of the epidermis that sits directly on top of the dermis. The cells of this layer are constantly dividing and pushing the older cells up to the surface. As they move upward and away from the blood supply they begin to die and undergo keratinization.

Ω Keratinization – a process cells go through where a strong protein called Keratin is deposited into the cell causing it to harden, flatten, and become water-resistant. Ω

Stratum Comeum

Approximately 30 layers of dead, keratinized cells that are continuously sloughing off. You have a new layer of epithelium every month. Tattoo ink is deposited into the dermis in order for it to last.

Ω Dander – cells that exfoliate from the epidermis Ω

Ω Dandruff – dander clumped with oil on the skull Ω
