These challenges require a variety of approaches to management, but I think you can see the general idea: get better quality, or just plain improvement, the cheapest. I always remember ^{the old} saying in the stage business: "Good-looking people are being sought, good-looking and cheap." (The second part is important, since I believe we're looking for people who can do good work cheaply, and who are good without all the other stuff that goes with the word "good.") I don't think that's true for these days, either.
