Curriculum Development for Students with Mild Disabilities Carroll J. Jones, 2010 Many teachers of students with mild disabilities experience difficulty writing IEPs and they lack a foundation in the regular education curriculum of academic skills and sequences associated with each grade level This book was designed to provide this foundation Presented in the form of scope and sequence charts that can be used as objectives for the State Frameworks goals and benchmarks this resource assists in preparing IEPs including the new process of identification of children with disabilities through their responses to intervention RTI An additional focus is on the impact of federal laws IDEA and NCLB on the curriculum and assessment in schools today The book has been reorganized into ten chapters including historical perspectives early childhood special education curricula oral expression curricula reading and listening curricula written expression curricula mathematics curricula educational technology curricula K 12 social and self competence curricula science curricula and evaluation reports case studies Appendix The scope and sequence charts were modified to include current national education standards and benchmarks and the skills in each of the academic areas that require annual state assessment These charts will assist teachers in modifying the general education curriculum for students with mild disabilities and to write complete Individual Education Programs using age appropriate and developmentally appropriate teaching and assessment materials Chapter summaries included for review purposes also serve as selective and motivational reading With special education teachers in short supply and the demands on their time so great this book will provide a valuable resource for cutting the clutter and moving to the heart of the teaching process determining what skills students need to move effectively to the next level

Children, Schools, And Inequality Doris R Entwisle, 2018-03-05

Educational sociologists have paid relatively little attention to children in middle childhood ages 6 to 12 whereas developmental psychologists have emphasized factors internal to the child much more than the social contexts in explaining children's development. Children, Schools and Inequality redresses that imbalance. It examines elementary school outcomes e.g. test scores, grades, retention rates in light of the socioeconomic variation in schools and neighborhoods, the organizational patterns across elementary schools and the ways in which family structure intersects with children's school performance. Adding data from the Baltimore Beginning School Study to information culled from the fields of sociology, child development and education, this book suggests why the gap between the school achievement of poor children and those who are better off has been so difficult to close. Doris Entwistle, Karl Alexander and Linda Olson show why the first grade transition, how children negotiate entry into full-time schooling, is a crucial period. They also show that events over that time have repercussions that echo throughout children's entire school careers. Currently the only study of this life transition to cover a comprehensive sample and to suggest straightforward remedies for urban schools, Children, Schools and Inequality can inform educators, practitioners and policymakers as well as researchers in the sociology of education and child development.

Children's Competencies Development in the Home Learning Environment Frank Niklas, Caroline Cohrssen, Simone Lehl, Amy R. Napoli, 2021-08-02 Federal Programs for Young Children: Review and Recommendations, 1973 Curriculum-based Assessment Carroll J. Jones, 2008 Although curriculum-based assessment (CBA) has been on the horizon for a number of years, there has been a need for a practical, classroom-based approach for its implementation. This second edition is a major revision and update that offers practical and specific methods for developing and using CBAs in an educational setting. It gives educators a highly specific step-by-step approach to building CBAs in the area of reading, word recognition, reading comprehension, content reading, mathematics and written expression. Each chapter offers detailed, easy-to-read and easy-to-follow instructions for the assessment construction process. To further clarify the process, extensive examples are given in table format. A unique feature of the text is the manner in which the author illustrates the principles of CBA by providing a case study on one student which is referred to in each chapter. Its formative assessment approach gives the teacher additional detailed information about students' OCO performance which in turn should guide the type of instruction designed and implemented, ultimately leading to higher performance on summative outcome measures. Additionally, detailed information is provided on subject area CBA construction, the creation and implementation of a district-wide CBA system for response to intervention and how to use IDEA's response to intervention in student evaluation.

Meece,Jacquelynne S. Eccles,2010-06-10 Children spend more time in school than in any social institution outside the home And schools probably exert more influence on children s development and life chances than any environment beyond the home and neighbourhood The purpose of this book is to document some important ways schools influence children s development and to describe various models and methods for studying schooling effects Key features include Comprehensive Coverage this is the first book to provide a comprehensive review of what is known about schools as a context for human development Topical coverage ranges from theoretical foundations to investigative methodologies and from classroom level influences such as teacher student relations to broader influences such as school organization and educational policies Cross Disciplinary this volume brings together the divergent perspectives methods and findings of scholars from a variety of disciplines among them educational psychology developmental psychology school psychology social psychology psychiatry sociology and educational policy Chapter Structure to ensure continuity chapter authors describe 1 how schooling influences are conceptualized 2 identify their theoretical and methodological approaches 3 discuss the strengths and weaknesses of existing research and 4 highlight implications for future research practice and policy Methodologies chapters included in the text feature various methodologies including longitudinal studies hierarchical linear models experimental and quasi experimental designs and mixed methods HLM 6 Stephen W. Raudenbush,2004 Mathematics and Transition to School Bob Perry,Amy MacDonald,Ann Gervasoni,2015-01-09 This edited book brings together for the first time an international collection of work focused on two important aspects of any young child s life learning mathematics and starting primary or elementary school The chapters take a variety of perspectives and integrate these two components in sometimes explicit and sometimes more subtle ways The key issues and themes explored in this book are the mathematical and other strengths that all participants in the transition to school bring to this period of a child's life the opportunities provided by transition to school for young children's mathematics learning the importance of partnerships among adults and among adults and children for effective school transitions and mathematics learning and teaching the critical impact of expectations on their mathematics learning as children start school the importance of providing children with meaningful challenging and relevant mathematical experiences throughout transition to school the entitlement of children and educators to experience assessment and instructional pedagogies that match the strengths of the learners and the teachers the importance for the aspirations of children families communities educators and educational organisations to be recognised as legitimate and key determinants of actions experiences and successes in both transition to school and mathematics learning and the belief that young children are powerful mathematics learners who can demonstrate this power as they start school In each chapter authors reflect on their work in the area of mathematics and transition to school place that work within the overall context of research in these fields predict the trajectory of this work in the future and consider the implications of the work both theoretically and practically Mathematics Education in the Early Years Tamsin Meaney, Ola Helenius, Maria L.

Johansson, Troels Lange, Anna Wernberg, 2016-01-22 This book presents chapters based on papers presented at the second POEM conference on early mathematics learning These chapters broaden the discussion about mathematics education in early childhood by exploring the debate about construction versus instruction Specific sections investigate the teaching and learning of mathematical processes and mathematical content early childhood teacher development transitions for young children between home and preschool between home and school and between preschool and school The chapters use a range of innovative theoretical and methodological approaches which will form an interesting basis for future research in this area
