The Instrumentalist, 2003

A Womb With a View Malcolm Stonestreet, 2024-10-11 This book delves into the life of the Church of England at a near grassroots level during a period of seismic change It seeks to capture the essence of experimental ministry during a time of national uncertainty While it doesn't provide definitive answers it explores various possibilities with honesty and humour The narrative shares the joys and challenges of parish ministry in diverse settings from the heart of a bustling city to the serene depths of rural Wensleydale from a sprawling inner city housing estate to the hills and coastlands of Cumbria It enthusiastically engages with ecumenical matters and approaches interfaith diversity with a certain naivety Here are the workings out of a practical theologian a priest working across disciplines and most powerfully working with and alongside communities The Ven Chris Burke Archdeacon of Barking He created a platform to build on of the largest centres for social action and community activity in the country Malcolm is courageous beyond belief and a true advocate of his faith and belief in human kind Mark Law MBC Chief Executive BARCA Leeds I found this lovely book quite a nostalgic read because it reminded me of the church into which I was ordained nearly 40 years ago I also found it deeply moving endearingly honest and at times profoundly inspiring Malcolm who is a natural entrepreneur manages to tackle some very serious subjects without ever taking himself too seriously and he enables some powerful reflection on the meaning of success in ordained ministry without trying to provide to many answers I hope you will enjoy reading it as much as I did James Newcome Bishop of Carlisle Sunday-school Essentials Amos
