Women of the Foreign Office Elizabeth Warburton, Richard Warburton, 2021-03-19 Since the suffrage campaigns in the early twentieth century the advancement of women's rights in the UK has been nonstop. Proponents of the cause have aimed for equality across all sectors: personal and civil rights, employment rights, equal pay, and yet Britain's first official female ambassador did not take up her position until 1976. Many obstacles lay between a capable educated woman and the fulfilment of her potential. Here Elizabeth and Richard Warburton cast a detailed eye over the advancement of women in the Foreign Office as diplomats, ambassadors, ministers, and Foreign Secretary. Leaving no stone unturned, they discuss the culturally conservative closed pillar of the Foreign Office in the context of the times and of the development of women's rights both in the UK and across the first world. Supported by first person accounts, they explore the stories of those who successfully broke through the constraints of convention, prejudice, and law, and why.

Monitoring the Quality of Education in Schools Vanessa Scherman, Roel J. Bosker, Sarah J. Howie, 2016-12-27 The monitoring of quality has been part of the educational landscape for many decades. Originally the need to monitor arose as part of an economic process whereby policy makers wanted to discern the return on investment in education. This bottom line thinking, while still prominent, has receded into the background in light of global changes and the emergence of a global economy. Now, in addition to the question what is the return on investment, the more important question is: are the students in schools ready to participate in the economy of a 21st century society? This is underpinned by the inquiry into what knowledge and competencies are required for students to participate meaningfully in nation building. This inquiry can only be undertaken by means of monitoring, evaluating where the students are and what is required so that students reach their potential. In an ever-changing technologically oriented world, the manner in which competencies and knowledge are identified and how these need to be measured and identified is important. In this book, the theory and practice of underpinning the monitoring of the quality of education is described. This is followed by a number of practical examples in the form of country case studies on how theory plays out in practice. The book further provides common themes across developed and developing economies, underscoring the need for approaches which are locally relevant but internationally transferable.
