The projects that involve the use of the color wheel. Actually being able to use it like students have that it is more than just a technique that keeps on the wall of some art room. There is a real purpose to purpose. It becomes a useful tool.

My little project was really to learn how to use the color wheel. The first step was to draw a circle. I have many different colors in my room, as well as a variety of plastic materials. I had not used the system very much, and the kids were more than ready to try to learn what they were.

They picked up the wheel of a lot of colors and were going to learn what they were. I had some pretty colorful markers and pencils, so drawing the colors was difficult.
