

Key Points to Remember:

1. Remember that using both the positive and negative control settings is important for the assay to be valid.
2. Always use both your negative and positive (control) wells in each of the 48 wells in the experiment. Double the amount of reagents used and separate the cells into two separate plates.
3. Remember that the 2nd column has all of your 48 samples. Remember that the 1st column is not used.
