

AP® Human Geography Free-Response Question #1

(20 minutes)

Read the passage.

Answer the question.

Over the past century, the world has experienced a massive increase in the number of people living in urban areas. This increase has led to a number of challenges, including overcrowding, pollution, and a loss of natural resources.

One of the most significant challenges is the loss of natural resources. As the world's population grows, the demand for natural resources such as water, land, and forests increases. This demand has led to the depletion of these resources, which in turn has led to a number of environmental problems.

One of the most serious problems is the depletion of water resources. As the world's population grows, the demand for water increases. This demand has led to the depletion of water resources, which in turn has led to a number of environmental problems.

One of the most serious problems is the depletion of water resources. As the world's population grows, the demand for water increases. This demand has led to the depletion of water resources, which in turn has led to a number of environmental problems.

Answer the question in 100–150 words.

1. Explain the concept of urbanization and describe the factors that have led to the rapid increase in the number of people living in urban areas.
2. Describe the challenges that urbanization poses for the environment and society. Be sure to include a discussion of the loss of natural resources.
3. Explain the concept of sustainable development and describe the ways in which it can be used to address the challenges of urbanization.
4. Discuss the role of government in addressing the challenges of urbanization. Be sure to include a discussion of the ways in which government can promote sustainable development.
