

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import policies, free trade is a system wherein all the goods of governments have free trade across international frontiers for the benefit of their own economies. Once the free trade system is in place, there have been various non-tariff trade barriers, which impede the free trade. Examples of these barriers include the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and the North Atlantic Trade Agreement (NAFTA) forum.

However, there are some barriers to the economic activities across the border trade that cannot be easily ignored or ignored. Therefore, according to Figure 10, a free trade zone improves the domestic and foreign economies by making the consumption and production decisions well informed. The domestic supply curve indicates domestic suppliers are willing and able to produce at different prices. If there were no international trade, the equilibrium price would be P_1 and the quantity produced would be Q_1 . If the equilibrium price would be P_2 and the quantity produced would be Q_2 , it would be produced only by domestic firms.

Figure 10
International Trade

It shows in free international trade the total supply harmonization the production for domestic and foreign producers. Domestic suppliers are supplied P_1 and quantity Q_1 . They are able to consume more of the domestic and foreign price. Also at P_2 , domestic firms are producing Q_2 and foreign producers are producing $Q_3 - Q_2$. Thus, domestic firms are producing less under free trade, whereas foreign firms are producing less under the harmonization.
