

Here on perforated graph paper the three forms of California Indian design are shown. The small white strips on each side of the square and the small black strips between groups of graph paper are placed together to create the very large sheet marked "Three forms graph" in red.

Left
A large pattern derived from the California Indian design, but paper was placed together to approximate the three forms "Three forms graph" in red.

Right
This pattern shows the small squares of white design, but the three forms show three lines of small squares in the center, red and green, to show the red and green patterns. The red and green patterns are in small squares in the three forms, "Three forms graph" in red.

Three forms graph was marked graph. This was done by small white strips on each side of the square and the small black strips between groups of graph paper were placed together to create the very large sheet marked "Three forms graph" in red.
