1. What is specialisation the key to better?
Specialisation is the key to better because it allows individuals to focus on a specific task or activity, which increases their productivity and quality of work. This is because they can become experts in their field, which allows them to perform tasks more efficiently and effectively.
2. What could different businesses gain from specialisation?
Different businesses can gain from specialisation in many ways. For example, a business that specialises in a particular product or service can become an expert in that field, which allows them to offer better quality and more competitive prices. Additionally, specialisation can lead to economies of scale, which can reduce costs and increase profitability.
3. What could happen without specialisation?
Without specialisation, businesses would likely be less productive and less competitive. This is because they would have to spread their resources across many different tasks, which would reduce their efficiency and quality. Additionally, they would not be able to benefit from economies of scale, which would increase their costs and reduce their profitability.
4. What could a business gain from specialisation?
A business can gain from specialisation in many ways. For example, a business that specialises in a particular product or service can become an expert in that field, which allows them to offer better quality and more competitive prices. Additionally, specialisation can lead to economies of scale, which can reduce costs and increase profitability.
5. What could a business lose from specialisation?
A business could lose from specialisation in many ways. For example, a business that specialises in a particular product or service may become too dependent on that product or service, which could make it vulnerable to changes in the market. Additionally, specialisation can lead to a lack of innovation, which could reduce the business's competitiveness in the long run.
