2. Describe the relationship between the following:
- a. Primary and secondary prevention: Primary prevention aims to prevent the onset of a disease, while secondary prevention aims to detect and treat a disease early to prevent complications.
- b. Prevalence and incidence: Prevalence is the total number of cases of a disease in a population at a given time, while incidence is the number of new cases of a disease in a population over a specific period.
- c. Relative risk and odds ratio: Relative risk is a measure of the risk of developing a disease in one group compared to another, while the odds ratio is a measure of the association between an exposure and an outcome.
- d. Case-control and cohort studies: Case-control studies look back in time to identify exposures in individuals with a disease, while cohort studies follow individuals forward in time to identify outcomes.
- e. Confounding and bias: Confounding is a distortion of the true relationship between an exposure and an outcome due to the presence of a third variable, while bias is a systematic error in the design, conduct, or analysis of a study.
3. Explain the importance of the following:
- a. Randomized controlled trials: These are the gold standard for evaluating the effectiveness of interventions, as they minimize bias and confounding.
- b. Systematic reviews and meta-analyses: These provide a comprehensive summary of the evidence on a specific topic, combining the results of multiple studies.
- c. Evidence-based medicine: This approach integrates the best available evidence with clinical expertise and patient values to guide clinical decisions.
- d. Health equity: This refers to the goal of ensuring that everyone has a fair and just opportunity to attain their highest level of health.
- e. Population health: This is the study of the distribution and determinants of health outcomes in a population, with a focus on preventing disease and promoting health.
