

Edith Wharton

Edith Wharton (born Edith Newbold Jones, January 24, 1862 – August 11, 1937) was an American writer and designer. Wharton drew upon her insider's knowledge of the upper-class New York "aristocracy" to portray realistically the lives and morals of the Gilded Age. In 1907, she became the first woman to win the Pulitzer Prize in Fiction, for her novel The Age of Innocence. She was inducted into the National Academy of Arts in 1930. Among her other well-known works are The House of Mirth, the novella Ethan Frome, and several notable ghost stories.

Despite not publishing her first novel until she was forty, Wharton became an extraordinarily productive writer. In addition to her 15 novels, seven novellas, and eighty-five short stories, she published poetry, books on design, travel, travel and lecture notes, and a memoir.

Many of Wharton's novels are characterized by subtle irony, and she is often credited with being the first American writer to use the technique of the "unreliable narrator".

Wharton's novels, such as The House of Mirth and Ethan Frome, are often considered to be the most realistic and powerful depictions of the Gilded Age in American literature. Her novels are often characterized by their detailed and realistic depictions of the lives and morals of the upper-class New York "aristocracy".

Immigrant Industry and the Arts
Immigrant growth and the use of ethnic languages created a new cultural landscape in the United States. The immigrant population was concentrated in urban areas, particularly in the Northeast and Midwest. This led to the development of immigrant industries and the arts, which often reflected the cultural values and traditions of the immigrant community.

Immigrant industries, such as the garment industry in New York City, often employed immigrant workers. These workers often faced difficult working conditions, including long hours and low wages. The arts, such as music and dance, often reflected the cultural values and traditions of the immigrant community.
