it is possible to combine efficiency and fault tolerance and shows how it is possible to develop efficient algorithms without concern for fault tolerance and then correctly and efficiently execute these algorithms on parallel machines whose processors are subject to arbitrary dynamic fail stop errors The efficient algorithmic approaches to multiprocessor fault tolerance presented in this monograph make a contribution towards bridging the gap between the abstract models of parallel computation and realizable parallel architectures Fault Tolerant Parallel Computation presents the state of the art in algorithmic approaches to fault tolerance in efficient parallel algorithms The monograph synthesizes work that was presented in recent symposia and published in refereed journals by the authors and other leading researchers This is the first text that takes the reader on the grand tour of this new field summarizing major results and identifying hard open problems This monograph will be of interest to academic and industrial researchers and graduate students working in the areas of fault tolerance algorithms and parallel computation and may also be used as a text in a graduate course on parallel algorithmic techniques and fault tolerance

Archaeology and Language II Roger Blench, Matthew Spriggs, 2003-09-02 Using language to date the origin and spread of food production Archaeology and Language II represents groundbreaking work in synthesizing two disciplines that are now seen as interlinked linguistics and archaeology This volume is the second part of a three part survey of innovative results emerging from their combination Archaeology and historical linguistics have largely pursued separate tracks until recently although their goals can be very similar While there is a new awareness that these disciplines can be used to complement one another both rigorous methodological awareness and detailed case studies are still lacking in the literature This three part survey is the first study to address this Archaeology and Language II examines in some detail how archaeological data can be interpreted through linguistic hypotheses This collection demonstrates the possibility that where archaeological sequences are reasonably well known they might be tied into evidence of language diversification and thus produce absolute chronologies Where there is evidence for migrations and expansions these can be explored through both disciplines to produce a richer interpretation of prehistory An important part of this is the origin and spread of food production which can be modelled through the spread of both plants and words for them Archaeology and Language II will be of interest to researchers in linguistics archaeologists and anthropologists of feature checking mechanisms Ps as typical lexical heads license these positions by theta marking them Within SubconP the complement is licensed by feature checking as within CP and the specifier is licensed by theta marking as within PP
