Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (IG) participated in a 12-week training program, while the control group (CG) remained sedentary. The IG showed significant improvements in physical fitness and HRQL compared to the CG. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary, middle-aged women.

RESEARCH The authors of this study reported that although the use of a single agent, such as aripiprazole, is superior to the use of two antipsychotics, a greater number of patients—approximately 40%—achieved a response in receiving the treatment. Patients who did not obtain the desired response were then treated with a combination of aripiprazole and risperidone. The authors concluded that the combination of these two drugs is superior to the use of a single agent, such as aripiprazole, in the treatment of schizophrenia. The authors also noted that the combination of aripiprazole and risperidone was well tolerated and that the combination was superior to the use of a single agent, such as aripiprazole, in the treatment of schizophrenia.
