

World AIDS Day — December 1, 2019

World AIDS Day, observed annually on December 1, draws attention to the status of the human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) epidemic. Approximately 37.9 million persons worldwide are living with HIV infection, including 1.7 million persons newly infected in 2018 (1).

With support from the U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR), several African countries are on track to achieve HIV epidemic control. In 2017, an estimated 1,020,419 persons in the United States and dependent areas were living with diagnosed HIV infections; 37,832 new cases were diagnosed in 2018 (2). The aim of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' proposed Ending the HIV Epidemic: A Plan for America initiative (3) is to end the U.S. HIV epidemic within 10 years.

Through global efforts, including PEPFAR, in 2018, 23.3 million persons worldwide received antiretroviral therapy. A report in this issue of MMWR describes the status of implementation of HIV case-based surveillance systems in 39 PEPFAR-supported countries (4).

Human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) case-based surveillance (CBS) systematically and continuously collects available demographic and health event data (sentinel events*) about persons with HIV infection from diagnosis and, if available, throughout routine clinical care until death, to characterize HIV epidemics and guide program improvement (1,2). Surveillance signals such as high viral load, mortality, or recent HIV infection can be used for rapid public health action. To date, few standardized assessments have been conducted to describe HIV CBS systems globally (3,4). For this assessment, a survey was disseminated during May–July 2019 to all U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief

* Sentinel events include various events throughout medical care for a client with diagnosed HIV infection, such as HIV recency status (recent or long-term infection at time of diagnosis), clinical laboratory values such as CD4 count and viral load, change in antiretroviral therapy regimens, and death.

Hahn,1995 Hahn begins by developing a definition of sickness that is based on the patient s perception of suffering and disturbance rather than on the physician s assessment of biomedical signs After reviewing the principal theories that account for the forms of sickness and healing found in different historical and cultural contexts he explores the relevance of both anthropological and epidemiological approaches to sickness focusing on the persistent gap between white and black infant mortality in the United States Hahn then describes contemporary Western medicine as it might be seen by a visiting foreign anthropologist

HIV/AIDS Community Information Services M Sandra Wood, Jeffrey T Huber, 2013-10-18 Information forms the basis for education and currently education is the only weapon available to stem the spread of HIV AIDS and to foster empathy toward individuals already affected by the disease HIV AIDS and Community Information Services provides readers with insight into the information construct within the AIDS arena and how that construct affects the provision of information services to the HIV AIDS affected population. It will serve as an irreplaceable reference as the number of individuals with AIDS increases creating a greater demand for information and making that information increasingly difficult to provide. While directories exist to assist with practical approaches to accessing HIV AIDS related information, none had served as a comprehensive resource concerning the nature of that information or the provision of information services. HIV AIDS Community Information Services fills that void. It fosters the enlightenment of the general public concerning the true nature of HIV AIDS, guides readers in providing information services both educational and recreational to individuals affected by HIV AIDS, and encourages the dissemination of instructional materials to those individuals at risk for infection. In doing so, contributors provide readers with information about the relationship between AIDS and the body of information concerning the disease, the complex nature of HIV AIDS related information available, HIV AIDS information services information as a means for empowerment, suggestions for future programs, potential collaboration efforts, and innovative services. An essential guide for information professionals, librarians, health educators, counselors, members of community based AIDS service organizations, and individuals affected by HIV AIDS. HIV AIDS Community Information Services fosters the creation, accession, collection, organization, dissemination, and sharing of information concerning the HIV AIDS epidemic and promotes the provision of services to individuals already affected by HIV AIDS.

Respiratory Diseases Research at NIOSH Institute of Medicine, National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Committee to Review the NIOSH Respiratory Disease Research Program, 2008-08-07. Respiratory diseases caused by exposures to dangerous materials in the workplace have tremendous implications for worker health and by extension the national economy. The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) estimates that deaths from work related respiratory diseases and cancers account for about 70% of all occupational disease deaths. NIOSH conducts research in order to detect and reduce work related hazardous exposures, injuries, and diseases. Its Respiratory Disease Research Program (RDRP) focuses on respiratory diseases. This National Research Council book reviews the RDRP to evaluate the 1) relevance of its work to improvements in occupational safety and health, and 2) the impact of research in reducing workplace respiratory illnesses. The assessment reveals that the program has made essential contributions to preventing occupational respiratory disease. The National Research Council has rated the Program a 5 out of 5 for relevance and a 4 out of 5 for impact. To further increase its effectiveness, the Respiratory Disease Research Program should continue and expand its current efforts, provide resources for occupational disease surveillance, and include exposure assessment scientists in its activities.

HIV and the Blood Supply Institute of Medicine, Committee to Study HIV Transmission Through Blood and Blood Products, 1995-10-05. During the early years of the AIDS epidemic, thousands of Americans became infected with HIV through the nation's blood supply. Because little reliable information existed at the time AIDS first began showing up in hemophiliacs and in others who had received transfusions experts disagreed about whether blood and blood products could transmit the disease During this period of great uncertainty decision making regarding the blood supply became increasingly difficult and fraught with risk This volume provides a balanced inquiry into the blood safety controversy which involves private sexual practices personal tragedy for the victims of HIV AIDS and public confidence in America's blood services system The book focuses on critical decisions as information about the danger to the blood supply emerged The committee draws conclusions about what was done and recommends what should be done to produce better outcomes in the face of future threats to blood safety The committee frames its analysis around four critical areas Product treatment Could effective methods for inactivating HIV in blood have been introduced sooner Donor screening and referral including a review of screening to exclude high risk individuals Regulations and recall of contaminated blood analyzing decisions by federal agencies and the private sector Risk communication examining whether infections could have been averted by better communication of the risks

Trends in the Well-being of America's Children and Youth, Healthy People 2010, Volume 1, January 24-28, 2000, 2000 Handbook of Clinical Psychology in Medical Settings Ronald H. Rozensky, Jerry J. Sweet, Steven M. Tavian, 2013-06-29 For two decades I have been responding to questions about the nature of health psychology and how it differs from medical psychology behavioral medicine and clinical psychology From the beginning I have taken the position that any application of psychological theory or practice to problems and issues of the health system is health psychology I have repeatedly used an analogy to Newell and Simon's General Problem Solver program of the late 1950s and early 1960s which had two major functional parts in addition to the executive component One was the problem solving core the procedural competence the other was the representation of the problem environment In the analogy the concepts knowledge and techniques of psychology constitute the core competence the health system in all its complexity is the problem environment A health psychologist is one whose basic competence in psychology is augmented by a working knowledge of some aspect of the health system Quite apparently there are functionally distinct aspects of health psychology to the degree that there are meaningful subdivisions in psychological competence and significantly different microenvironments within the health system I hesitate to refer to them as areas of specialization as the man who gave health psychology its formal definition Joseph Matarazzo has said that there are no specialties in psychology cited in the editors preface to this book
