Interface Dale D. Wade, 2007 When prescribed burning is conducted at the wildland urban interface WUI the smoke that is produced can sometimes inconvenience people but it can also cause more serious health and safety problems The public is unlikely to continue to tolerate the use of prescribed fire regardless of the benefits if burn managers cannot keep smoke out of smoke sensitive areas In the South forest management organizations commonly require that plans for prescribed burns pass a smoke screening review and some States require such a review before they will authorize a burn Current screening systems however do not incorporate criteria for use at the WUI This guide describes modifications to the Southern Smoke Screening System for burns at the WUI These modifications couple new research findings with the collective experience of burners who have extensively used the 1976 Southern Smoke Screening System This new smoke screening system is designed for use on burns less than 50 acres in size and has undergone several years of successful field testing in Florida

Perspectives in Civil Engineering Jeffrey S. Russell, 2003-01-01 This report contains 27 papers that serve as a testament to the state of the art of civil engineering at the outset of the 21st century as well as to commemorate the ASCE's Sesquicentennial. Written by the leading practitioners, educators, and researchers of civil engineering, each of these peer-reviewed papers explores a particular aspect of civil engineering knowledge and practice. Each paper explores the development of a particular civil engineering specialty, including milestones and future barriers, constraints, and opportunities. The papers celebrate the history, heritage, and accomplishments of the profession in all facets of practice, including construction, facilities, special structures, engineering mechanics, surveying and mapping, irrigation and water quality, forensics, computing, materials, geotechnical engineering, hydraulic engineering, and transportation engineering. While each paper is unique, collectively they provide a snapshot of the profession while offering thoughtful predictions of likely developments in the years to come. Together, the papers illuminate the mounting complexity facing civil engineering, stemming from rapid growth in scientific knowledge, technological development, and human populations, especially in the last 50 years. An overarching theme is the need for systems-level approaches and consideration from undergraduate education through advanced engineering, materials, processes, technologies, and design methods and tools. These papers speak to the need for civil engineers of all specialties to recognize and embrace the growing interconnectedness of the global infrastructure economy, society, and the need to work for more sustainable, life-cycle-oriented solutions. While embracing the past and the present, the papers collected here clearly have an eye on the future needs of ASCE and the civil engineering profession.

Agricultural System Models in Field Research and Technology Transfer Lajpat R. Ahuja, Liwang Ma, Terry A. Howell, 2016-04-19 Most books covering the use of computer models in agricultural management systems target only one or two types of models. There are few texts available that cover the subject of systems modeling comprehensively and that deal with various approaches, applications, evaluations, and uses for technology transfer.

Cognitive Modeling for Automated Human Performance Evaluation at Scale Haiyue Yuan, Shujun Li, Patrice Rusconi, 2020-09-16 Cognitive models and software tools have been widely used for both research and commercial purposes. Although they have proved very useful, there are some limitations preventing large-scale modeling and simulation tasks to be carried out efficiently and effectively. In this book, we aim to provide readers with a systematic overview of the state of the art, cognitive modeling software tools, and applications, and an introduction to a new software framework for facilitating large-scale modeling and simulation of human performance tasks.

The authors first review cognitive modeling theories and then present an overview of state of the art software tools for cognitive modeling and simulation Finally the book focuses on the new software framework and a research prototype called CogTool including how to incorporate behavioral data such as eye tracking data in modeling and simulation tasks Typical applications of CogTool in HCI and cyber security are given to demonstrate its usefulness
