and the Writer, 2016-08-09 Literature and the Writer was first conceived with the hope the essays would shed light on several dimensions of the authorial craft It was the hope of the editor that the selected essays would examine not only writers choice of vocabulary but also their deliberate selection of grammatical constructions and word order and their seamless weaving together of plots and imagery Moreover the analyses would also draw attention to how the writing process impacts the development of characters and the formulation of thematic strands in fiction Thus a wide variety of authors are deliberately selected to give the text depth writers of popular fiction as well as modern classics are included and contrasts are established between traditional writers and those who prefer to follow experimental trends Modernists are set against postmodernists absurdists vs realists minority ethnicities vs majority cultures and dominant genders appear in contrast to subordinated ones Clearly the major tenet of the collection is that the writing profession provides an unending dilemma that deserves to be explored in more detail as readers try to determine how authorial voices confuse while simultaneously elucidating their audience how texts are constructed by authors and yet deconstructed by the very words they choose to include how silence functions as inaudible yet audible discourse and how authorial self concept shapes not only itself but is also echoed in the fictional characters writers who appear in the texts Post-World War II Masculinities in British and American Literature and Culture Stefan Horlacher, Kevin Floyd, 2016-04-08 Analyzing literary texts plays films and photographs within a transatlantic framework this volume explores the inseparable and mutually influential relationship between different forms of national identity in Great Britain and the United States and the construction of masculinity in each country The contributors take up issues related to how certain kinds of nationally specific masculine identifications are produced how these change over time and how literature and other forms of cultural representation eventually question and deconstruct their own myths of masculinity Focusing on the period from the end of World War II to the 1980s the essays each take up a topic with particular cultural and historical resonance whether it is hypermasculinity in early cold war films the articulation of male anxieties in plays by Arthur Miller David Mamet and Sam Shepard the evolution of photographic depictions of masculinity from the 1960s to the 1980s or the representations of masculinity in the fiction of American and British writers such as Patricia Highsmith Richard Yates John Braine Martin Amis Evan S Connell James Dickey John Berger Philip Roth Frank Chin and Maxine Hong Kingston The editors and contributors make a case for the importance of understanding the larger context for the emergence of more pluralistic culturally differentiated and ultimately transnational masculinities arguing that it is possible to conceptualize and emphasize difference and commonality simultaneously

Fictions of State Patrick Brantlinger, 2019-06-30 In this ambitious book Patrick Brantlinger offers a cultural history of Great Britain focused on the concept of public credit from the 1694 founding of the Bank of England to the present. He draws on literary texts ranging from Augustan satire such as Gulliver's Travels to postmodern satire such as Martin Amis's Money and A Suicide Note. All critique the misrecognition of public credit as wealth. The economic foundations of modern nation states involved national debt, public credit and paper money. Brantlinger traces the emergence of modern imperial Great Britain from those foundations. He analyzes the process whereby nationalism both the cause and the result of wars and imperial expansion multiplied national debt and produced crises of public credit resolved only through more nationalism and war. During the first half of the eighteenth century conservatives attacked public credit as fetishistic and characterized national debt as alchemical. From the 1850s the stabilizing theories of public credit authored by David Hume, Adam Smith, Henry Thornton and others helped initiate the first social science economics. In the nineteenth century literary criticism both paralleled and questioned early capitalist discourse on public credit and nationalism while the Victorian novel refigured debt as the individual private credit and debt. During the era of high modernism and Keynesian economics the notion of high culture as genuine value recast the debate over money and national indebtedness. Brantlinger relates this cultural historical trajectory to Marxist poststructuralist and postcolonial theories about the decline of the European empires after World War II, the global debt crisis and the weakening of western nation states in the postmodern era.

Contemporary Fiction, Celebrity Culture, and the Market for Modernism Carey Mickalites, 2022-01-13 Arguing that contemporary celebrity authors like Zadie Smith, Ian McEwan, Martin Amis, Kazuo Ishiguro, Salman Rushdie, Eimear McBride and Anna Burns position their work and public personae within a received modernist canon to claim and monetize its cultural capital in the lucrative market for literary fiction, this book also shows how the corporate conditions of marketing and branding have redefined older models of literary influence and innovation. It contributes to a growing body of criticism focused on contemporary literature as a field in which the formal and stylistic experimentation that came to define a canon of early 20th century modernism has been renewed, contested and revised. Other critics have celebrated these renewals variously arguing that contemporary literature picks up on modernism's unfinished aesthetic revolutions in ways that have expanded the imaginative possibilities for fiction and revived questions of literary autonomy in the wake of postmodern nihilism. While this is a compelling thesis and one that rightly questions an artificial and problematic periodization that still lingers in academic criticism, those approaches generally fail to address the material conditions that structure literary production and the generation of cultural capital whether in the historical development of modernism or its contemporary permutations. This book addresses this absence by proposing a materialist history of modernism's afterlives

Masculinity in Male-Authored Fiction,

1950-2000 A. Ferrebe, 2005-12-15 Tracing the influence of masculinity on fictional form and theme through an era of dizzying social change this timely new book conducts a close analysis of English novels selected for contrasting definitions of the male gender from the allegedly Angry Young Men to the contemporary confessions of Nick Hornby The literary period since 1950 is interpreted as one of intense political and stylistic negotiation by male authors with the gendered subject positions both of fictional characters and those who read about them
