Abstract. Staphylococcus aureus is the most common cause of nosocomial infection, and the use of antibiotics has led to the development of strains resistant to many antimicrobial agents. In this study, the prevalence of methicillin-resistant strains of S. aureus was determined in a tertiary care hospital. A total of 100 strains of S. aureus were isolated from various clinical specimens, and their susceptibility to methicillin was determined by the disk diffusion method. The results showed that 60% of the strains were resistant to methicillin. The prevalence of methicillin-resistant strains of S. aureus was higher in the intensive care unit (ICU) than in other wards. The study highlights the need for strict infection control measures and the use of antibiotics to prevent the spread of methicillin-resistant strains of S. aureus.
