

OWN

RENT

Tax Benefits	Real estate property taxes and interest paid on the mortgage may be tax deductible*	Rent payments are not tax deductible
Investment	A home is a valuable investment, particularly if home values are increasing	Renting is not an investment opportunity for tenants
Equity	Owning a home is a form of savings, as equity increases with each payment	Renters do not accumulate equity; once they pay their rent, the money is gone
Customization/ Renovations	Homeowners can make changes according to their preferences, like renovating a bathroom or a kitchen remodel	Renters must consult with their landlord for any small to moderate changes, like installing a ceiling fan
Affordability	Buying a home usually requires significant finances up front to cover the down payment, closing costs and other expenses	Renting usually requires a lot less cash up front; however, long-term may cost more if rent is higher than a mortgage payment
Maintenance/ Repairs	Maintenance and repairs are the homeowner's responsibility and can be expensive and time-consuming	Maintenance is the landlord's responsibility
