Marianela (English Edition) Benito Pérez Galdós, 2021-04-06 The sun had set. After the brief interval of twilight the night fell calm and dark and in its gloomy bosom the last sounds of a sleepy world died gently away. The traveller went forward on his way hastening his step as night came on. The path he followed was narrow and worn by the constant tread of men and beasts and led gently up a hill on whose verdant slopes grew picturesque clumps of wild cherry trees, beeches and oaks. The reader perceives that we are in the north of Spain. Our traveller was a man of middle age, strongly built, tall and broad shouldered; his movements were brisk and resolute, his step firm, his manner somewhat rugged, his eye bold and bright, his pace was nimble considering that he was decidedly stout and he was the reader may at once be told, though somewhat prematurely, as good a soul as you may meet with anywhere. He was dressed as a man in easy circumstances should be dressed for a journey in spring weather, with one of those round shady hats which from their ugly shape have been nicknamed mushrooms, a pair of field glasses hanging to a strap and a knotted stick which when he did not use it to support his steps served to push aside the brambles when they flung their thorny branches across so as to catch his dress. He presently stopped and gazing round the dim horizon he seemed vexed and puzzled. He evidently was not sure of his way and was looking round for some passing native of the district who might give him such topographical information as might enable him to reach his destination. 'I cannot be mistaken,' he said to himself. 'They told me to cross the river by the stepping stones and I did so, then to walk on straight on. And there to my right I do in fact see that detestable town which I should call Villafangosa by reason of the enormous amount of mud that chokes the streets. Well, then I can but go on straight on. I rather like the phrase and if I bore arms I would adopt it for my motto in order to find myself at last at the famous mines of Socartes.' Taken from Marianela English Edition written by Benito Pérez Galdós.

Spain Argentina and the United States to draw upon Spain's rich body of nineteenth century classics to address contemporary concerns about gender sexuality race class disability celebrity immigration identity social justice and domestic violence This book provides a snapshot of visual adaptations in the first two decades of the new millennium examining how novelistic material from the past has been remediated for today's viewers through film television theater opera and the graphic novel Its theoretical approach refines the binary view of adapters as either honoring or opposing their source texts by positing three types of adaptation strategies salvaging which preserves old stories by giving them renewed life for modern audiences utilizing which draws upon a pre-existing text for an alternative purpose building upon the story and creating a shift in emphasis without devaluing the source material and appropriation which involves a critique of the source text often with an attempt to dismantle its authority Special attention is given to how adapters address audiences that are familiar with the source novels and those that are not This examination of the vibrant afterlife of classic literature will be of interest to scholars and educators in the fields of adaptation media Spanish literature cultural studies performance and the graphic arts

Marianela Geraldine M. Scanlon, 1988 Masculine Figures Nicholas Wolters, 2023-01-25 Based on years of archival research in Madrid and Barcelona this interdisciplinary study offers a fresh approach to understanding how men visualized themselves and their place in a nation that struggled to modernize after nearly a century of civil war colonial entanglement and imperial loss

Masculine Figures is the first study to provide a comprehensive overview of competing models of masculinity in nineteenth century Spain and it is particularly novel in its treatment of Catalan texts and previously unstudied evidence e g department store catalogs commercial advertisements fashion plates and men s tailoring journals Fictional masculinity performs a symbolic role in representing and negotiating the contradictions male novelists often encountered in their attempts to professionalize not only as writers but also as businessmen professors lawyers and politicians Through specific and recurring figures like the student the priest the businessman and the heir male novelists portray and represent an increasingly middle class world at odds with the values and virtues it inherited from an imperial Spanish past and those it imported from more industrialized nations like England and France The visual culture of the time and place marks the material turn in middle class masculinity and sets the stage for discussions of race and sexuality
