

LESSON 16: Reproductive System

1st SEM | BSN-1 | MARIEB & TORTORA

Reproductive System

Gonads

- Primary sex organs are the testes in men and the ovaries in women.
- produce sex cells (gametes), and secrete sex hormones.

★ The remaining reproductive system structures are accessory reproductive organs.

★ Male and female reproductive systems are different, but the same purpose is to produce offspring.

Man- manufacture male gametes called sperm and deliver them to the woman's reproductive tract.

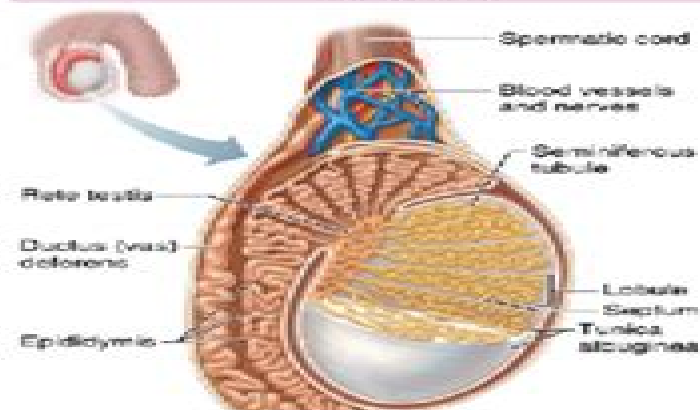

Woman- produces female gametes, called ova (singular ovum), or eggs.

Zygote- a sperm and egg fuse to produce a fertilized egg (zygote).

- ★ Once fertilization has occurred, the female uterus provides a protective environment in which the embryo, later called the fetus, develops until birth.

Anatomy of the Male Reproductive System

TESTES

★ primary reproductive organs of the male.

- ★ exocrine (sperm-producing) function
- ★ endocrine (testosterone-producing) function.
- ★ The golf ball-sized testis is approximately 4 cm (1.5 inches) long and 2.5 cm (1 inch) wide.
- ★ connected to the trunk via the spermatic cord.

Spermatic cord

- A connective tissue sheath that encloses blood vessels, nerves, and the ductus deferens.

Tunica albuginea

- Fibrous connective tissue capsule surrounds each testis. (White Coat)

Septa

- formed by extensions of the tunica albuginea
- plunge into the testis and divide it into a large number of wedge-shaped lobules.

Lobule

- contains one to four tightly coiled seminiferous tubules.

Seminiferous tubules

- "sperm-forming factories."
- responsible for producing sperm. They account for around 90% of the testicular volume.
- empty sperm into another set of tubules, the rete testis.

Rete testis

- located to one side of the testis.
- carry sperm from the seminiferous tubules then travel to the efferent ducts, epididymis. (hugs the external surface of the testis.)

Interstitial cells

- soft connective tissue surrounding the seminiferous tubules
- distinct cells that produce androgens—the most important of which is testosterone.
