

Human Rights Social Responsibility Essay Example

Human rights violations are a major occurrence in many countries throughout the world. Human rights include being free from abuse, assault, and exploitation.

Major violations in these countries include human trafficking, exploitation of women and children, discrimination and abuse. The scope of this analysis includes human rights violation against women and children in Ghana, Columbia and India; three different countries on three different continents. The United States and large U. S. corporations have trade agreements and conduct day-to-day business in each of these countries. These powerful entities have an obligation to not only conduct responsible business but to also ensure the social welfare of the local population.

Ghana

The United States is one of Ghana's primary trading partners and many U. S. businesses have market share in the West African country. The U. S. has maintained a trade agreement with Ghana since the year 2000, and has good political and business relationships with the country.

However, there is a startling amount of violence and abuse occurring with its society. Despite our country's close financial ties with Ghana, the population is suffering, without any attention or action being taken by the U. S. population. According to the Department of State, "violence against women and children; female genital mutilation...; societal discrimination against women, trafficking in women and children; and child labor, including forced child labor" are major issues in Ghana's society. Reports indicate that Ghana is a source, hub, and destination for trafficking of women and children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.

Most of the destitute children bought and sold are either boys forced to work arduous hours in fishing communities or girls used as domestic servants. Women are bought and sold while being promised education and steady work, but upon arrival in foreign locations, they are forced into prostitution. Not only are women and children being bought and sold, those that stay in Ghana are being abused at an alarming rate. A recent study in Ghana on violence revealed that one in three women has been beaten, slapped or physically punished by a current or a previous partner.

The government is still trying to ratify domestic violence policy that would make it easier to actually prosecute offenders. Despite open protest from women's advocacy groups, proposed legislation ideas have not been turned into law. Along with abuse, women face considerable amounts of discrimination in the workplace and elsewhere. Women with skills and training are minimally discriminated against but, according to State Department findings, "Women, especially in rural areas, remained subject to burdensome labor conditions and traditional male dominance. Ghana appears to be doing little to protect its women and children, and the United States Government, along with many domestic corporation

Human Rights Education Dr Ghanshyam Vatsa, Gireesh Tripathi, Priyanka Malhotra, Ms. Kshitija Landge, 2022-09-26 This book presents a critical investigation of the creation dissemination and consumption of HRE as well as an analysis of how the discourse is created historically socially and politically via the practice of global organizations and local NGOs The concept that HRE is formed of ideas of human and education which are both complicated and have a myriad of facets is presented at the beginning of the book The book demonstrates how over the course of time a dominant discourse of HRE which was constructed by the institutional framework of the United Nations has come to prominence It also demonstrates how this dominant discourse is reproduced and validated through the practice of intermediary NGOs involved in HRE activities to community groups A large number of non governmental organizations NGOs all over the globe are using human rights education HRE as a method of community empowerment with the strong conviction that it would assist people in leading better lives These processes may be understood in a number of different ways one of which is that they convert universal human rights speech using words and symbols that make them relevant to the day to day lives of individuals and that have cultural resonance However an alternative and more radical viewpoint is that such processes should participate people in modes of critical examination into the ways that current power structures keep the status quo and regulate not only how we comprehend and speak regarding social injustice and but also how we act on it This is a more radical perspective Global Politics for the IB Diploma Ben Fugill,Jane Hirons,Brian Hull,2024-04-26
