10.1 INTRODUCTION

The balance sheet and profit and loss account provide significant information about the firm to the owners, management, and investors, but these financial statements do not provide other useful information required by the management for decisions making. The very objective of the firm is to know the kind of funds that were available during the accounting period and for what purposes these funds were utilized. The balance sheet of a firm discloses the position of assets, liabilities, and capital at the end of a particular year. But it does not
