 21 2013 a chemical weapons attack on the suburbs of Damascus reminds the world of the existence of the Syrian war Hundreds of journalists from every corner of the world rush to the frontier only to leave disappointed when Obama decides not to bomb They leave behind 200 000 estimated victims and more than half of a population of 22 million people dispersed or refugeed in nearby countries the worst humanitarian crisis since WWII according to the UN Francesca Borri is one of them But she does not leave She is thirty years old For months she covers the battle of Aleppo as a freelance reporter And she quickly realizes that to report a war is to hide with dozens of women and children even a baby born there in a grave a piece of soil under the ground that is as expensive as three houses or to scavenge for anything to burn for some warmth a broken slipper the plastic hand of a toy or to mistake bloody figments of skull for rubble To report a war is also to meet with officials more worried about the stain of snow on their Clarks than the people they are supposed to help It is to explain what is happening in Aleppo to journalists who have only been there once on vacation and bought a carpet It is risking one s life because of the jealousy of a fellow reporter And it is also about dreaming of driving at night with the windows open about remembering impossible little things the particular light on that day in that caf at the beach when you were a kid the eyes of people you love all the minuscule simple joys that can be lost in a moment Syrian Dust is a raw and powerful account of the Syrian war that throws the reader right in the middle of it without any shelter BE A HERO Alessio Favaretto,2025-06-12
