

Jose Rizal: The Poet of Philippine Revolution

3 pages | 631 words

Jose Rizal is the Philippines' national hero. He was a fantastic polymath. One of the fields he mastered is poetry. While other poets wrote out of large imagination, Rizal wrote mainly out of eagerness for his motherland. Numerous other poets compose or wrote for the fame or to please a customer. He constantly wrote under pressure. He lived throughout the time of the corrupt colonial Spanish federal government. This is most likely why there is such poignancy in his poetry. It is as though he wishes for a better life for his people. Yet he likewise looked after and comprehended that Spain was not all to blame. He was born to an abundant household. He was afforded a correct education despite the truth that his sibling Paciano was believed of being a subversive. His first instructor was his mom. She taught him the rudiments of the standard alphabets offered then. The very first poem he ever composed was composed at age 8. The initial title is "Sa Aking Mga Kabata". Roughly translated in English the title reads "My Childhood Friends". It exhorted his generation to like their native tongue. It already reflected a strong nationalism stoked by his young mind's perception of the colonizer's atrocities. The first stanza as translated in English reads this method: If genuinely an individuals dearly enjoy, The tongue to them by Heaven sent, They'll surely wish for liberty Like a bird above in the sky. His subsequent poetic pieces were carried out in Filipino, Spanish and English. Rizal was a polyglot to the highest degree able to interact in a minimum of 22 languages. A poem written in his youth appropriately entitled "A La Juventud Filipina" equated in English as "To The Filipino Youth" shows his desire for the more youthful generation to take the reins of reform and reduce the plight of the motherland. He likewise repeats a love for Spain and differentiates between the nation and the corrupt system. The first and 4th stanza of this poem reads: Lift up your radiant brow, This day, Youth of my native strand! Your abounding talents show Resplendently and grand, Fair hope of my Motherland! See that in the ardent zone, The Spaniard, where shadows stand, Doth offer a shining crown, With wise and merciful hand To the son of this Indian land. Rizal's poetry even in the early years was rhythmically attractive and communicated well. The style was intense and interesting. His poems were not written for the sake of espousing a cause although he did that effectively. His personal activities against the colonizing country ultimately led to his martyrdom. His last poem originally written in Spanish was written from prison and as was his execution done with courage belying a man facing death. His final poem was entitled "Mi Ultimo Adios" translated in English as "My Final Farewell". It reflects the poignancy of the realization of his impending execution. It also reflects the steadfastness of the man as he faces his martyrdom. The final stanza reads as follows: Farewell, parents, brothers, beloved by me, Friends of my childhood, in the home distressed; Give thanks...
