PASSAGE AND MULTIPLE CHOICE QUESTIONS

Read the following passage. Then answer questions 1–5.

excerpt from To Build a Fire by Jack London

Day had broken cold and grey, exceedingly cold and grey, when the man turned aside from the main Yukon¹ trail and climbed the high north-bank, where a thin and stile-crowded trail led seaward through the fir spruce timberland. It was a steep bank, and he paused for breath at the top, exercising the art to himself by looking at his watch. It was nine o'clock. There was no sun nor hint of sun, though there was not a cloud in the sky. It was a clear day, and yet there seemed an impenetrable pall² over the face of things, a subtle gloom that made the day dark, and that was due to the absence of sun. While that did not worry the man, he was used to the lack of sun. It had been days since he had seen the sun, and he knew that a few more days must pass before that cheerful orb, the south, would just peep above the sky-line and slip immediately from view.

The man flung a look back along the way he had come. The Yukon lay a mile wide and hidden under three feet of ice. On top of this lay were as many feet of snow. It was all pure white, rolling in gentle undulations where the ice-jams of the freeze-up had formed. North and south, as far as his eye could see, it was unbroken white, save for a dark latitude that curved and retired from around the spruce-covered island to the south, and that curved and retired away from the north, where it disappeared behind another spruce-covered island. This dark latitude was the trail—the main trail—that led south three hundred miles to the Chilkoot Pass, Dyea, and salt water, and that led north seventy miles to Dawson, and still on to the north a thousand miles to Nikolai, and finally to St. Michael on Bering Sea, a thousand miles and half a thousand more.

But all this—the mysterious, far-reaching latitude trail, the absence of sun from the sky, the tremendous cold, and the inconceivable and wilderness of it all—made no impression on the man. It was not because he was long used to it. He was a new-comer to the land, a cheechako, and this was his first winter. The trouble with him was that he was without imagination. He was quick and alert to the things of life, but only to the things, and not to the significances. Fifty degrees below zero meant eighty cold degrees of frost. Such fact impressed him as being cold and uncomfortable, and that was all. Fifty degrees below zero was good for a bit of frost that hurt and that must be guarded against by the use of colliques, ear-flaps, warm mukluks, and thick socks. Fifty degrees below zero was to him just precisely fifty degrees below zero. That there should be anything more to it than that was a thought that never entered his head.
