High-Speed Rail Authority: "Investment With Potential" Rejected Federal FDOT
 The Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) has rejected a $1.5-billion investment in high-speed rail by the High-Speed Rail Authority (HSRA) for the proposed route from Washington, D.C. to New York City. The FRA's decision is based on the HSRA's failure to provide sufficient information on the project's financial viability and the potential for private investment. The FRA's decision is a significant setback for the HSRA's efforts to build a high-speed rail network in the United States.
