Mansfield, N.A. Pateman, N. Bednarz, 2013-03-09 Social constructivism is just one view of learning that places emphasis on the social aspects of learning Other theoretical positions such as activity theory also emphasise the importance of social interactions Along with social constructivism Vygotsky's writings on children's learning have recently also undergone close scrutiny and researchers are attempting a synthesis of aspects of Vygotskian theory and social constructivism This re-examination of Vygotsky's work is taking place in many other subject fields besides mathematics such as language learning by young children It is interesting to speculate why Vygotsky's writings have appealed to so many researchers in different cultures and decades later than his own times Given the recent increased emphasis on the social nature of learning and on the interactions between student teacher and context factors a finer grained analysis of the nature of different theories of learning now seems to be critical and it was considered that different views of students learning of mathematics needed to be acknowledged in the discussions of the Working Group Normal Instructor and Primary Plans, 1926 Navigating Ethical Dilemmas in Creative Arts Therapies Thomson J. Reconceptualizing Early Mathematics Learning Lyn D. English,Joanne T. Mulligan,2013-05-09 This book emanated primarily from concerns that the mathematical capabilities of young children continue to receive inadequate attention in both the research and instructional arenas Research over many years has revealed that young children have sophisticated mathematical minds and a natural eagerness to engage in a range of mathematical activities As the chapters in this book attest current research is showing that young children are developing complex mathematical knowledge and abstract reasoning a good deal earlier than previously thought A range of studies in prior to school and early school settings indicate that young learners do possess cognitive capacities which with appropriately designed and implemented learning experiences can enable forms of reasoning not typically seen in the early years Although there is a large and coherent body of research on individual content domains such as counting and arithmetic there have been remarkably few studies that have attempted to describe characteristics of structural development in young students mathematics Collectively the chapters highlight the importance of providing more exciting relevant and challenging 21st century mathematics learning for our young students The chapters provide a broad scope in their topics and approaches to advancing young children s mathematical learning They incorporate studies that highlight the importance of pattern and structure across the curriculum studies that target particular content such as statistics early algebra and beginning number and studies that consider how technology and other tools can facilitate early mathematical development Reconceptualising the professional learning of teachers in promoting young children s mathematics including a consideration of the role of play is also addressed

Teacher's Professional Development Sabine Krolak-Schwerdt, Sabine Glock, Matthias Böhmer, 2014-04-03 A central aspect of teachers professional knowledge and competence is the ability to assess students achievements adequately Giving grades and marks is one prototypical task in this context Besides giving grades assessments for school placements or tracking decisions belong to these tasks Relevant students characteristics which influence teachers assessments do not only involve academic achievement but also students responses to different task demands as well as non academic characteristics such as learning motivation or school anxiety Closely associated with the investigation of teachers assessment competences and more specifically the investigation of conditions associated with high quality of assessments is the development and evaluation of teacher training programs to improve professional competences In recent years there has been considerable progress in the domain of professional teacher training however only a very limited number of studies are dedicated to the question to what extend training programs might offer valuable approaches to improve the quality of assessments and to implement high assessment competences Another important field which is closely related to teachers competences concerns the question how teachers professional development is linked to students learning and learning outcomes In recent years the societal demand for evidence that teachers professional development will result in improved student learning outcomes is increasing This volume brings together questions on assessment training and learning in the professional development of teachers which have not been fully discussed yet The identification of these research gaps was the reason for dedicating a series of lectures given at the University of Luxembourg 2012 to the topic of professionalization of teachers in these domains Therefore this book contains contributions from outstanding international scholars in different academic disciplines to present ideas about open research questions concerning the domains of assessment training and learning in the professional development of teachers

Industrial Education Magazine Charles Alpheus Bennett, William Thomas Bawden, 1922 Spelling Rebecca Treiman, 2013-06-29 are the findings that Wade Woolley and Siegel obtained when they studied children for whom English was a second language Although the second language speakers performed more poorly than the native speakers on tests of syntactic knowledge

phoneme deletion and pseudoword repetition the second language speakers were not worse than the native speakers in spelling. These results suggest that even if children have not fully mastered the sound system of their second language they need not be disadvantaged in spelling it. The findings appear to pose a challenge to views of reading and spelling that place primary emphasis on phonology. The Muter and Snowling study together with the Nunes Bryant and Bindman study broadens the focus by examining aspects of spelling beyond phonology. Muter and Snowling in their longitudinal study of British school children examined the degree to which various linguistic skills measured between the ages of 4 and 6 predicted spelling ability at age 9. The results support the idea that phonological skill plays an important role in spelling development and further suggest that awareness of phonemes is more strongly related to spelling ability than awareness of rhymes. In addition, grammatical awareness appears to predict spelling skill. Children who are able to reflect on meaning relationships among words may be in a position to understand how this information is represented in English spelling.
