The Other Kind of Funnies Han Yu, 2016-12-14 The Other Kind of Funnies refutes the mainstream American cultural assumption that comics have little to do with technical communication; that the former are entertaining in a low brow sense and juvenile whereas the latter is practical and serious to the point of stuffiness. The first of its kind, this book demonstrates the exciting possibilities of using comics in technical communication. It defines comics as a medium and art form that includes cartoons, comic strips, comic books and graphic novels, provides conceptual and historical backgrounds on comics and discusses the appeals and challenges of using comics style technical communication. More specifically, it examines comics style instructions, educational materials, health risk communication and political propaganda communication. The author argues that comics style technical communication encourages reader participation, produces covert persuasion, facilitates intercultural communication, benefits underprivileged audiences such as children and readers of lower literacy and challenges the positivist view of technical communication. An abundance of comics style technical communication examples carefully selected from across cultures and times demonstrates the argument. While the book proposes that comics can create user friendly, visually oriented, engaging and socially responsible technical communication, it is also quick to acknowledge the limitations and challenges of comics style technical communication and provides heuristics on how to cope with them. The Other Kind of Funnies is unique in its interdisciplinary approach. It focuses on technical communication but speaks to design, cultural and intercultural studies, historical studies and to some extent education, politics and art.

The challenge is not to customize products and services in itself but to do it in a profitable way. The implementation of a product configuration system is among the most powerful ways of achieving this in practice, offering a reduction of the lead time for products and quotations, faster and more qualified responses to customer inquiries, fewer transfers of responsibility and fewer specification mistakes, a reduction of the resources spent for the specification of customized products and the possibility of optimizing the
