ORGANISM STRUCTURES & PROCESSES

Parts of a Plant

Read the following text about different parts of a plant. Then, answer the questions that follow.

Roots

- Anchor the plant in the soil.
- Absorb water and nutrients from the soil.

Stem

- Support the plant.
- Transport water and nutrients from the roots to the leaves.

Leaves

- Perform photosynthesis.
- Lose water vapor through small openings called stomata.

How Do Plants Make Food?

Plants make their own food through a process called photosynthesis.

Photosynthesis is the process by which plants use sunlight, water, and carbon dioxide to produce glucose and oxygen.

Plants use glucose for energy and growth. They also release oxygen into the air, which is essential for many animals to survive.

Plants also have other adaptations to help them survive. For example, some plants have thick, waxy leaves to prevent water loss. Others have deep roots to reach water and nutrients.

TAYLOR'S TRAITS: INHERITED & ACQUIRED

Read the following text about Taylor, a young girl who has many traits. Some of these traits are inherited, and some are acquired.

Inherited traits are traits that are passed down from parents to offspring. These traits are determined by genes.

Acquired traits are traits that are learned or developed over time. These traits are not passed down from parents to offspring.

For example, Taylor's brown hair is an inherited trait. Her ability to ride a bicycle is an acquired trait.

Some traits are both inherited and acquired. For example, Taylor's height is inherited, but her ability to jump is acquired.

Other traits are neither inherited nor acquired. For example, Taylor's favorite color is a trait that is neither inherited nor acquired.

Some traits are inherited, but they are not always expressed. For example, Taylor's mother has blue eyes, but Taylor has brown eyes.

Other traits are acquired, but they are not always permanent. For example, Taylor's ability to ride a bicycle is a skill that she can lose if she doesn't practice.

Some traits are inherited, but they are not always beneficial. For example, Taylor's mother has a genetic condition that causes her to have a higher risk of heart disease.

Other traits are acquired, but they are not always beneficial. For example, Taylor's habit of eating too much sugar can lead to health problems.

Some traits are inherited, but they are not always visible. For example, Taylor's mother has a genetic condition that causes her to have a higher risk of heart disease.

Makerspaces, Innovation and Science Education Michael Tan, 2022-02-27 This book provides an overview to a range of theories in science and technology that inform the different ways in which makerspaces can be educative Makerspaces are an indispensable site for science technology engineering and mathematics STEM instruction and pose novel risks and opportunities for STEM instruction Educators are likely to reach towards activities that have a high degree of engagement but this might result in observations like it looks like fun but what are they learning Beginning from the question of how we know what we know in science the author asserts that understanding scientific knowledge requires us to know more than the abstract concepts typically presented in schools The social and material aspects of knowledge are also important these take the form of questions such as What is the interplay between knowledge and power How do we understand that we can have a feel for materials and artefacts that we cannot completely describe in words How do we know what ideas ought to be made real though technology and engineering Significantly this book also discusses the ethical dimensions of STEM education in thinking about the kinds of STEM education that could be useful for open futures This book will be useful to graduate students and educators seeking an expansive view of STEM education More generally these ideas outline a possible new strategy for a vision of school that is not merely training or preparing students for work Education needs to also prepare students for sociopolitical participation and with STEM being central to our contemporary lives this book provides insights for how this can happen in makerspaces
