in the tissues produced by different causes which include reduction of atmospheric PO₂ as in high altitude and secondary to pathological conditions such as sleep breathing and pulmonary disorders anemia and cardiovascular alterations leading to inadequate transport delivery and exchange of oxygen between capillaries and cells Nowadays it has been shown that hypoxia plays an important role in the genesis of several human pathologies including cardiovascular renal myocardial and cerebral diseases in fetal young and adult life Several mechanisms have evolved to maintain oxygen homeostasis Certainly all cells respond and adapt to hypoxia but only a few of them can detect hypoxia and initiate a cascade of signals intended to produce a functional systemic response In mammals oxygen detection mechanisms have been extensively studied in erythropoietin producing cells chromaffin cells bulbar and cortical neurons pulmonary neuroepithelial cells smooth muscle cells of pulmonary arteries and chemoreceptor cells While the precise mechanism underpinning oxygen sensing is not completely known several molecular entities have been proposed as possible oxygen sensors i e Hem proteins ion channels NADPH oxidase mitochondrial cytochrome oxidase Remarkably cellular adaptation to hypoxia is mediated by the master oxygen sensitive transcription factor hypoxia inducible factor 1 which can induce up regulation of different genes to cope the cellular effects related to a decrease in oxygen levels Short term responses to hypoxia included mainly chemoreceptor mediated reflex ventilatory and hemodynamic adaptations to manage the low oxygen concentration while more prolonged exposures to hypoxia can elicit more sustained physiological responses including switch from aerobic to anaerobic metabolism vascularization and enhancement of blood O₂ carrying capacity The focus of this research topic is to provide an up to date vision on the current knowledge on oxygen sensing mechanism physiological responses to acute or chronic hypoxia and cellular tissue organ adaptations to hypoxic environment

What makes written words so special to the brain? Gui Xue,Urs Maurer,Mohamed L Seghier,2015-01-22 Reading is an integral part of life in today s information driven societies Since the pioneering work of Dejerine on word blindness in brain lesioned patients the literature has increased exponentially from neuropsychological case reports to mechanistic accounts of word processing at the behavioural neurofunctional and computational levels tapping into diverse aspects of visual word processing These studies have revealed some exciting findings about visual word processing including how the brain learns to read how changes in literacy impact upon word processing strategies and whether word processing mechanisms vary across different alphabetic logographic or artificial writing systems Other studies have attempted to characterise typical and atypical word processes in special populations in order to explain why dyslexic brains struggle with words how multilingualism changes the way our brains see words and what the exact developmental signatures are that would shape the acquisition of reading skills Exciting new insights have also emerged from recent studies that have investigated word stimuli at the system network level by looking for instance at how the reading system interacts with other cognitive systems in a context dependent fashion how visual language stimuli are integrated into the speech processing streams how both left and right hemispheres cooperate and interact during word processing and what the exact contributions of subcortical and cerebellar regions to reading are The contributions to this Research Topic highlight the latest findings regarding the different issues mentioned above particularly how these findings can explain or model the different processes mechanisms pathways or cognitive strategies by which the human brain sees words The introductory editorial summarising the contributions included here highlights how varieties of behavioural tests and neuroimaging techniques can be used to investigate word processing mechanisms across different alphabetic and logographic writing systems
