

Math Report Comments: 3rd OR 4th grade or Year 4 OR 5

Overview of Trimester 2 and 3:

During trimesters two and three, students have had opportunities to develop their understanding of known and unknown concepts in measurement. They explored ways to measure things and solve problems involving volumes and masses of objects. They learned how to interpret and create frequency tables, pictographs and bar graphs. Students reviewed their understanding of place value and learned to round numbers to estimate and check reasonableness of answers. Students learned to recognize and describe different quadrilaterals by learning their characteristics. They also developed efficient methods to find the perimeter and area of a rectangle and irregular shapes.

Student comments:

XXX has made good progress in math this year; she is beginning to show greater confidence when approaching new concepts. She has learned how to determine the unknown whole number in a multiplication or division equation and is able to solve multi-step problems using the four operations. XXX is able to draw a scaled bar graph to represent data and then interpret it appropriately. She can also confidently tell the time to the nearest minute and measure time intervals. Overall, a great year of learning XXX!

XXX has made good progress this trimester in Math. Since her recent diagnosis involving "anxiety around math," we have worked on building her confidence levels. XXX is able to complete problems involving all four operations, but at times, her methodical approach slows her down and frustrates her. To alleviate this, she has been working in small target groups with an adult to help keep her on task. The score below (slightly below grade level) is a truer reflection of her ability and I hope she can continue this newfound confidence into 4th grade. Well done XXX!

XXX has made excellent progress during trimester three as the results reflect below. She has gone from working 'at' grade level to working 'well above.' The key to XXX's success was building her confidence levels in this area. She was always more than capable of achieving, but she had to believe it to allow her to challenge herself with new, harder concepts and strategies. She is now able to determine the unknown number in multiplication and division equations, read time to the nearest minute and round 3-digit numbers to the nearest 10, 100 and 1000. XXX is also able to draw a scaled bar graph to represent data and interpret it appropriately. Congratulations on a successful year of learning XXX!

XXX continues to impress when approaching all mathematical activities. He is able to use a large range of strategies to approach problems involving all four operations. XXX has surpassed the predicted level of xx points growth instead gaining xx points during this year. XXX has the capacity to work at a level far beyond his age and is un-phased by new challenges when they make him 'think harder.' Congratulations on a very successful year of math learning XXX!
