Financial Literacy and Stock Market Participation Maarten van Rooij,Annamaria Lusardi,Rob Alessie,2007 Individuals are increasingly put in charge of their financial security after retirement Moreover the supply of complex financial products has increased considerably over the years However we still have little or no information about whether individuals have the financial knowledge and skills to navigate this new financial environment To better understand financial literacy and its relation to financial decision making we have devised two special modules for the DNB Household Survey We have designed questions to measure numeracy and basic knowledge related to the working of inflation and interest rates as well as questions to measure more advanced financial knowledge related to financial market instruments stocks bonds and mutual funds We evaluate the importance of financial literacy by studying its relation to the stock market Are more financially knowledgeable individuals more likely to hold stocks To assess the direction of causality we make use of questions measuring financial knowledge before investing in the stock market We find that while the understanding of basic economic concepts related to inflation and interest rate compounding is far from perfect it outperforms the limited knowledge of stocks and bonds the concept of risk diversification and the working of financial markets We also find that the measurement of financial literacy is very sensitive to the wording of survey questions This provides additional evidence for limited financial knowledge Finally we report evidence of an independent effect of financial literacy on stock market participation Those who have low financial literacy are significantly less likely to invest in stocks

Enterprising Women Mary Hallward-Driemeier, 2013-06-10 This book brings together new household and enterprise data from 41 countries in Sub Saharan Africa to inform policy makers and practitioners on ways to expand women entrepreneurs economic opportunities Sub Saharan Africa boasts the highest share of women entrepreneurs but they are disproportionately concentrated among the self employed rather than employers Relative to men women are pursuing lower opportunity activities with their enterprises more likely to be smaller informal and in low value added lines of business The challenge in expanding opportunities is not helping more women become entrepreneurs but enabling them to shift to higher return activities A central question addressed in the book is what explains the gender sorting in the types of enterprises that women and men run The analysis shows that many Sub Saharan countries present a challenging environment for women Four key areas of the agenda for expanding women's economic opportunities in Africa are analyzed: strengthening women's property rights and their ability to control assets; improving women's access to finance; building human capital in business skills and networks; and strengthening women's voices in business environment reform. These areas are important both because they have wide gender gaps and because they help explain gender differences in entrepreneurial activities. It is particularly striking that while gender gaps in education tend to close with higher incomes, gaps in women's property rights and in women's participation in reform processes do not. As simply raising a country's income is unlikely to be sufficient to give women equal ability to control assets or have greater voice, more proactive steps will be needed. Practical guidelines to move the agenda forward are discussed for each of these key areas.
