As a result, I don't understand the existing literature. The problem is the terminology. The paper by Smith is written in layman's terms. The last sentence of the introduction is the clearest. "Rational choice economics is wrong and a laissez-faire gets the world just as bad. But there is something different for Smith, or better said the new method. Unconstrained free will. Smith says the world is better than it is."

This method for identifying a single subject as a responder to a stimulus is commonly used in the study of the effects of drugs on the brain. It is based on the assumption that a single subject will respond to a stimulus in a consistent manner. This method is used to identify subjects who are responsive to a stimulus in a consistent manner.
