The First World War, 1914-1918 Gerd Hardach, 1981 The First World War unquestionably represents an important climacteric in economic history However the significance of that climacteric is variously interpreted Essentially there are four themes whose order of priority depends on the observer s view point the decay of the classical capitalist world economy based on Great Britain and the gold standard the progress of industrialisation overseas brought about by the temporary economic paralysis of Europe the long term effect of structural changes in the economies of the warring industrial countries more especially the merging of the economy and the apparatus of state finally the development of the international labour movement from its nadir in August 1914 to its triumphant culmination of the Russian October Revolution I have endeavoured to the best of my ability to do justice to these various aspects and to place them in a common context which might be described as the crisis of the capitalist world economy

Conflict and Compromise M.M. Farrar, 2012-12-06 The historical literature on the first world war has devoted relatively little attention to the Allied blockade of the Central Powers The few published studies have concentrated either on the blockade's naval aspects or exclusively on the British contribution Little effort has been made heretofore to distinguish the French role This study focuses on the French contribution to the diplomatic as contrasted with the maritime blockade of the Central Powers It discusses primarily French relations with the so called European border neutral states principally Switzerland but also the Netherlands and the three Scandinavian countries Only in the diplomatic aspects of the Allied blockade program did the French play a distinctive role Their token contribution to maritime blockade activity remained subordinate to the British An examination of Franco neutral relations involves not only a study of those diplomatic contacts per se but also a comparison of French and British tactics as a reflection of differing economic warfare concepts This study also investigates the development of a French blockade organization to meet the demands of this new weapon the diplomatic blockade ,
