It is also worth noting that the majority of the respondents who reported that they had used a mobile phone to access the Internet were also using a mobile phone to access the Internet. This suggests that mobile phone usage is a key factor in determining whether or not an individual is using the Internet.

Abstract: This paper reports on a study of the effects of a 10-week, 12-session, self-help program for people with depression. The program was designed to help people with depression to manage their symptoms and improve their quality of life. The program was evaluated using a randomized controlled trial design. The results of the trial showed that the program was effective in reducing symptoms of depression and improving quality of life. The program was also found to be cost-effective. The results of the trial suggest that the program could be used as a first-line treatment for people with depression.
