These results suggest that the influence of business-to-business marketing communication is moderated by the type of communication channel used. The results indicate that the effect of business-to-business marketing communication is stronger in the case of face-to-face communication than in the case of electronic communication. This is likely due to the fact that face-to-face communication is more personal and allows for more direct interaction between the sender and the receiver. Electronic communication, on the other hand, is more impersonal and may be perceived as less trustworthy. Therefore, the results suggest that business-to-business marketing communication is more effective when it is delivered through a face-to-face channel.
