Iaizzo, 2010-03-11 A revolution began in my professional career and education in 1997 In that year I visited the University of Minnesota to discuss collaborative opportunities in cardiac anatomy physiology and medical device testing The meeting was with a faculty member of the Department of Anesthesiology Professor Paul Iaizzo I didn't know what to expect but as always I remained open minded and optimistic Little did I know that my life would never be the same During the mid to late 1990s Paul Iaizzo and his team were performing anesthesia research on isolated guinea pig hearts We found the work appealing but it was unclear how this research might apply to our interest in tools to aid in the design of implantable devices for the cardiovascular system As discussions progressed we noted that we would be far more interested in reanimation of large mammalian hearts in particular human hearts Paul was confident this could be accomplished on large hearts but thought that it would be unlikely that we would ever have access to human hearts for this application We shook hands and the collaboration was born in 1997 In the same year Paul and the research team at the University of Minnesota including Bill Gallagher and Charles Soule reanimated several swine hearts Unlike the previous work on guinea pig hearts which were reanimated in Langendorff mode the intention of this research was to produce a fully functional working heart model for device testing and cardiac research     Handbook of Cardiovascular Magnetic Resonance Imaging Gerald M. Archer,M.B. Djamgoz,E. Loew,J.C. Partridge,S. Vallerga,2013-04-17 John Lythgoe was one of the pioneers of the Ecology of Vision a subject that he ably delineated in his classic and inspirational book published some 20 years ago 1 At heart the original book aimed generally to identify inter relationships between vision animal behaviour and the environment John Lythgoe excelled at identifying the interesting questions in the ecology of an animal that fitted the answers presented by an analysis of the visual system Over the last twenty years however since Lythgoe s landmark publication much progress has been made and the field has broadened considerably In particular our understanding of the adaptive mechanisms underlying the ecology of vision has reached considerable depths extending to the molecular dimension partly as a result of development and application of new techniques This complements the advances made in parallel in clinically oriented vision research 2 The current book endeavours to review the progress made in the ecology of vision field by bringing together many of the major researchers presently active in the expanded subject area The contents deal with theoretical and physical considerations of light and photoreception present examples of visual system structure and function and delve into aspects of visual behaviour and communication Throughout the book we have tried to emphasise one of the major themes to emerge within the ecology of vision the high degree of adaptability that visual mechanisms are capable of undergoing in response to diverse and dynamic environments and behaviours
