Standards of Practice for Medical Interpreters

Pre-conference:
When possible hold a Pre-conference to determine the provider's goal for the medical interview.

Introduction:
Formally introduce yourself to both the patient and provider.

Referrals:
The interpreter is able to refer the patient to the appropriate support services rather than assuming the social work role.

Positioning:
The seating arrangements will be adjusted to ensure the most interaction between the provider and patient.

Privacy:
Allow privacy as dictated by the appointment type.

Body Clues:
Observe and report any body language, cues that might not be observed by the provider.

Communication Modes:
Choose the appropriate mode of interpretation for the specific medical event. First or third person, consecutive versus simultaneous.

Accuracy:
Accurately transmits information between the patient and provider.

No omissions, additions:
The interpreter will not omit, delete or add information to the interpretation session.

Transparency:
Employ transparency as to ensure that communication can be reestablished.

Clarification:
Asks for repetition, explanation or verification of concepts when appropriate.

Confidentiality:
Ensure that confidentiality and the interpreter's Code of Ethics are maintained.

All verbalization will be transmitted:
Informs all parties in the appointment that everything will be transmitted with no exception.

Limited advocacy:
Advocacy is only done upon systemic barriers and is done within a team operation.

Cultural Brokerage:
Cultural brokerage is only done when communication breaks down and is requested by the provider to assist in understanding a cultural nuance. Although the interpreter may be a cultural expert it cannot be assumed that an individual will be knowledgeable to all the diversity given within an ethnic group.

The voice of the patient and providers:
The interpreter does not advise, counsel or interject personal opinions.
The interpreter is not the educator or the provider but rather the voice and ears for the parties involved.

Diplomacy:
Diplomatically negotiates difficult situations with patients, providers and staff.

Conference calls:
Encourages conference calls to facilitate communications between the providers and patient.

Transmission of information:
Interpreters shall render the message faithfully, always conveying the content and spirit of the speaker, using language most readily understood by the persons whom they service.
