Hale and Kipp

On the night of July 23, 1849, a man named Thomas Kipp was observing the night sky in Andover through a telescope. He had already examined the sky with the telescope. Kipp noticed a faint glow that he had never seen before. He called a friend who was with him to look at the new object. These stars had many known objects to gaze. But the glow was not on the chart.

The day was bright in New Mexico. Hale Kipp went outside to look at the night sky through his telescope as he often did.

It was a very clear night. Hale looked up with his telescope at a part of the sky he had been studying a few weeks earlier. Suddenly, he gasped in surprise. He had spotted something new. Hale had seen a faint, fuzzy glow. Kipp had made a quick sketch of what he saw. He believed he had just found a comet.

Hale and Kipp showed the new object to other astronomers. They showed it to their friends. Hale sent a message to a friend in Massachusetts that night. He told the people of the state what he had seen.

Thomas Kipp also sent a message to the state's newspapers. The next morning, he heard back from the state. Kipp, Hale Kipp, had discovered a new comet.

Twelve hours after Hale and Kipp had first seen the object, it had a name: Comet Hale Kipp.
