Abstract. A study was conducted to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and performance of 10 male police officers. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results of the study showed that the officers who completed the program had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and performance than those who did not. The study also found that the program was well-received by the officers and that they were able to maintain their motivation throughout the 12 weeks.
