Ability John Mighton,2009-05-26 For decades teachers and parents have accepted the judgment that some students just aren't good at math John Mighton the founder of a revolutionary math program designed to help failing math students feels that not only is this wrong but that it has become a self fulfilling prophecy A pioneering educator Mighton realized several years ago that children were failing math because they had come to believe they were not good at it Once students lost confidence in their math skills and fell behind it was very difficult for them to catch up particularly in the classroom He knew this from experience because he had once failed math himself Using the premise that anyone can learn math and anyone can teach it Mighton's unique teaching method isolates and describes concepts so clearly that students of all skill levels can understand them Rather than fearing failure students learn from and build on their own successes and gain the confidence and self esteem they need to be inspired to learn Mighton's methods set forth in The Myth of Ability and implemented in hundreds of Canadian schools have had astonishing results Not only have they helped children overcome their fear of math but the resulting confidence has led to improved reading and motor skills as well The Myth of Ability will transform the way teachers and parents look at the teaching of mathematics and by extension the entire process of education Childhood Education

Numerical Development - From cognitive functions to neural underpinnings Korbinian Moeller,Elise Klein,Klaus F Willmes - von Hinckeldey,Karin Kucian,2015-02-24 Living at the beginning of the 21st century requires being numerate because numerical abilities are not only essential for life prospects of individuals but also for economic interests of post industrial knowledge societies Thus numerical development is at the core of both individual as well as societal interests There is the notion that we are already born with a very basic ability to deal with small numerosities Yet this often called number sense seems to be very restricted approximate and driven by perceptual constraints During our numerical development in formal e.g. school but also informal contexts e.g. family street we acquire culturally developed abstract symbol systems to represent exact numerosities in particular number words and Arabic digits refining our numerical capabilities In recent years numerical development has gained increasing research interest documented in a growing number of behavioural neuro scientific educational cross cultural and neuropsychological studies addressing this issue Additionally our understanding of how numerical competencies develop has also benefitted considerably from the advent of different neuro imaging techniques allowing for an evaluation of developmental changes in the human brain In sum we are now starting to put together a more and more coherent picture of how numerical competencies develop and how this development is associated with neural changes as well In the end this knowledge might also lead to a better understanding of the reasons for atypical numerical development which often has grievous consequences for those who suffer from developmental dyscalculia or mathematics learning disabilities Therefore this Research Topic deals with all aspects of numerical development findings from behavioural performance to underlying neural substrates from cross sectional to longitudinal evaluations from healthy to clinical populations To this end we included empirical contributions using different experimental methodologies but also theoretical contributions review articles or opinion papers
