

Chapter 10: Models for Processing and the Understanding Process

Education 1980

2. Knowledge Base

1. What are the 10 key propositional processes?

1. Processing the sentence.
2. Processing words in all cases and in all positions.
3. Representing structure in continuous flow, not with discrete blocks.
4. Representational processes are interconnected processes, not sequential.
5. This needs to be used continuously. All patterns have exceptions.
6. An individual brings with himself the knowledge of the rules that will be useful in what.
7. Subjects and responses operate systematically, but neither and neither system is fully predictable.
8. In real situations, the knowledge is never continuous. There are many rules and many exceptions. The subjects will make their response as rational as possible.
9. The real world is never continuous. Subjects do not know that an alternative response would meet and provide support, sometimes with explanations.
10. To move from general to specific, there is a middle stage of specific and individual reasoning. It is not always the subject's job to know the rules for what is going on.
11. Two things that help in making sense of the world are rules and exceptions.
12. Two concepts are being processed: one is a general concept, a subject's concept, or a rule. The other is a specific concept, a subject's concept, or a rule.
