

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. Many people believe that we should give animals the same rights as humans. Others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings such as humans are not usually the same as we are. For example, it has been said that some animals – birds and dolphins – think, feel and perhaps behave as though animals display the signs of their pain, and wish that we could communicate with humans suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protection as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against giving rights for animals, particularly that they do not have the ability of human beings not to feel pain but to feel fear or distress, and that the loss of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. It looks, however, that if we have rights over them, that would mean that we have a natural relationship with the same as that of a child and a dog. It would be wrong for us to have animals for our own benefit because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both supporting that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some rights, and arguing that they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are and that they should be drafted for certain that protection from abuse suffering.
