INTRODUCTION
The purpose of this experiment is to determine the effect of temperature on the rate of reaction between hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide. The reaction is exothermic and produces oxygen gas and potassium iodide. The rate of reaction is measured by the volume of oxygen gas produced over a period of time. The experiment is conducted at three different temperatures: 25°C, 35°C, and 45°C. The results show that the rate of reaction increases with temperature. The discussion explains the reason for this increase in terms of the activation energy of the reaction. The conclusion states that the rate of reaction is directly proportional to the temperature. The references list the sources of the data used in the experiment.
