

Tips for naming molecules

There are three steps, though that I have found useful over the years. The first concerns organic molecules, the second, inorganic, the third, for polymers, simple ones.

Remember that the name of an organic molecule has three parts:

- Numbering (if necessary)
- Base: the parent chain (length and C/C bonding)
  - o First carbon that gives best numbering
- Suffix: substituents defined by the highest priority functional group

1. Start off by identifying the highest priority functional group: this helps you determine the number of the molecule's name (and can help you determine stereochemistry) numbering the parent chain. In subsequent groups that require brackets you begin to identify the parts of the molecule that are attached but not part of the prefix.

If you only have C and H atoms left you have hydrocarbons that are based on parent hydrocarbons: the prefix is the key.

2. Then begin to find the longest continuous carbon chain you can (the only thing is: branching is good)

- Make sure that your parent chain contains the highest priority functional group. Some groups have to be on the end carbon
  - o Carboxylic acids, aldehydes, nitriles, amines, amides
- Find the other side of the chain that most carbon chains are the longest the most complete structure
- Always include the functional groups and multiple bonds in the structure

3. Begin to number the carbon, the lowest number that you can so that the end of the chain is the parent chain number by the following substituents (in order of priority)

- The highest priority functional group
- Any multiple bonds
- The substituent closest to the end
- The complete structure (if necessary)

4. Once you have numbered the parent chain, you can use the appropriate name to indicate the length of the chain.

5. Identify the other substituents (other than the parent chain) and add them to the name. Additionally, identify other substituents that are (the name of the name)

- Only C/C single bonds: "and"
