Abstract — The authors describe the development of a new approach to the design of a control system for a robot arm. The approach is based on the use of a new type of control system, called a "self-organizing control system" (SOCS). The SOCS is a control system that can learn from experience and adapt to changing conditions. The authors describe the design of a SOCS for a robot arm and the results of its use in a simulation. The SOCS is shown to be able to learn the dynamics of the robot arm and to control it with high accuracy. The authors also describe the design of a SOCS for a robot arm with a flexible joint. The SOCS is shown to be able to learn the dynamics of the flexible joint and to control it with high accuracy. The authors conclude that the SOCS is a promising approach to the design of control systems for robots.
