ethics Fiction on the Page in Nineteenth-Century Magazines Maria Damkjær, 2024-11-25 What makes fiction recognizable as fiction Texts are shaped by their material print but this book argues that they can also be made in response to it that the needs of the magazine in the nineteenth century spurred writers to create hybrid entangled texts Using book history genre theory and literary close reading this book argues that narrative fiction in the nineteenth century popular periodical was a malleable substance By looking at typography and the attempts to squeeze in too much text or stretch out too little text the book asks what the relationship was between the page that needed filling and the short story that tried to fill it In the messy hybrids and outliers we explore what fiction might have become The book works with magazines like the Englishwoman's Domestic Magazine first series 1852 59 the Family Herald 1842 1945 the Home Circle 1849 54 and authors like Elizabeth Gaskell George Augustus Sala and Samuel Beeton It also includes a chapter on Charles Dickens's arguably least successful venture Master Humphrey's Clock 1840 1 where Dickens was noticeably straining to sell and fill a weekly magazine While the book is not attempting to destabilise the status of canonical fiction it does ask how the page makes fiction happen what kind of readers magazines imagined for themselves and what readers thought they were reading when they picked up an issue The book argues that magazines projected a print imaginary a symbolic realm where the magazine fits perfectly into the lives of happy active readers Reimagining Capitalism: Applying Negative Dialectics for a Better Future David Atkinson, 2023-05-09 The Covid 19 pandemic reinforced the perception that capitalism is in crisis that the future is volatile uncertain complex and ambiguous and that increasingly our thinking about it and ability to manage and organize ourselves within it are challenges we are ill equipped for Despite the efforts of many writers and a surfeit of manuscripts concerning the need to rethink capitalism questions concerning the struggle for social and economic justice remain unanswered While some suggest that with corrective action businesses can save the world there is an acceptance that they cannot do so alone However while governments might strengthen their institutions enacting more effective policies the challenge is simply laid bare at the feet of industry and commerce Is the challenge to confront the establishment just too big to face Government institutions and the barons of industry and commerce are but interrelated interconnected interplaying components in one socio economic system This book offers readers a progressive radical and academic provocation of that system it also proposes a field of Applied Negative Dialectics In Reimagining Capitalism Atkinson confronts the need to rethink capitalism and presents an integrated range of thinking through a lens of applied negative dialectics questioning how and why things might have occurred and where and how we might begin to improve them literature The Study of English Literature Margaret Janice Turner,1998 Performing Nationhood Mimasha Pandit,2019-06-18 This book serves as the corridor to one's self. It began as a humble attempt to interrogate the performance history of Swadeshi Bengal. The burgeoning public space and audibility of voices hitherto unheard presented a two-way problem for the colonisers as well as for the colonised. The thinking mind that hid behind a facade of obedience suddenly appeared before all. The transparent veil separating the hidden from the manifest was torn apart. In the context of swadeshi and boycott agitation, performative spaces like theatre, jatra, and songs did not just serve as a forum for disseminating the notions of nationhood put forward by the intellectuals. The ideas gained a life of their own once they were placed in the performative space. Encompassing both the performer and the audience, recipient of the ideas, the notion underwent a change at various planes of consciousness. The notion of nation as disseminated by the performances acquired a different meaning at the level of enactment and attained an entirely new substance when received by the audience. None of these exchanges occurred in complete passivity of any one party present in the performative space. Consequently, the emergent emotion of nationhood developed as a nuanced image of self. This book has tried to locate the beginning of that emotion of national self.
